THE HISTORY

of the

Dunham Family

By Grace L. Ewald 1943

I shall give as well as I can, the history of the descendants of the Dunham Family, beginning with Ephraim and Eliza Clark Dunham, who were grandfather, great-grandfather, and great-great-grandfather and grandmother of the members of this reunion.

Of the childhood of Ephraim and Eliza little is known, except that they each had several brothers and sisters, all striving to get as much of an education as was possible in those days.

Ephraim and Eliza were married December 24, 1812, in the state of New Jersey, and soon afterward moved to Warren County, Ohio, 30 miles northeast of Cincinnati, a settlement now known as Morrow, Ohio.

While living there in the year of 1837, Ephraim purchased eighty acres of land in Noble County, Indiana, at the land office at Fort Wayne. This was under the Martin Van Buren administration and under the Land Grant Act of Congress of 1820. The original sheepskin Grant for this land, signed by President Martin Van Buren, is now in the possession of one of Ephraim's grandsons, Oliver Vreeland. But as far as we know Ephraim and Eliza never lived on this land.

Ephraim and Eliza Dunham were pioneers in Ohio and were the first people in their community to have a cook stove, since most of the early settlers did their cooking in fire places.

Ephraim was a Tanner, Shoemaker and a Harnessmaker by trade, and was of Scotch descent. He was a good man but never a very great church-goer and never belonged to any church. Yet he had firm religious principles and always read the Bible every day in family worship, which was held with the entire family and the apprentices—the employees in those days being called apprentices.

During a Cholera epidemic, Ephraim went to help whenever or wherever called, often to bury the dead, even though there was greater danger of taking this dread disease from handling a dead body than a living one. People in those early days were buried in just a winding sheet and a rough pine box for a coffin.

Eliza Clark Dunham was of English descent and was of very small stature, but she was very courageous as so many of our early pioneer mothers had to be. She was a very methodical little body, keeping her home in perfect order, where she could lay her hand on things day or night. She always had many herbs on hand, since she, as well as her husband, was called on many times to go to care for the sick. Eliza's uncle, Abra. Clark, was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

These pioneer Dunhams, who were our grandmother, great-grandmother, and great-great-grandmother and grandfather, had nine children. Four died in infancy; the others were: John Robert, Mary Ann, Phoebe Williams, Jonas, and Susan Amelia.

The other four children and their mother, Eliza, who lived to be 53 years old, were buried in a Baptist Cemetery near Morrow, Ohio.

On October 21, 1854 Ephraim Dunham sold his effects and came to Iowa. The sale bill he issued read as follows:

EPRAM DUMAH

One of these original sale bills is the proud possession of another of Ephraim's grandsons, Jonas Dunham.

Ephraim Dunham's new land, purchased from the government in the year 1854, was on the south edge of the village later known as Indian Town, Iowa. While living there, Ephraim and his daughter, Phoebe, who had purchased land adjoining her father's, each gave an acre of their land for a cemetery, which still stands near the old settlement, surrounded only by farming land at the present time.

Ephraim Dunham lived to be 63 years old, dying on August 14, 1857. He was buried in this cemetery, as was his daughter Phoebe Dunham, who died June 6, 1896.

Jonas Dunham was the first of Ephraim's family to move west, coming 2 years before his father did. Jonas was married September 7, 1852 to Mary Clark Voorhies, in Warren County, Ohio, just before he started west. They made the trip in covered wagons, first settling on a farm in Lee County, Ia. While they lived there, their first son, Dennis Clark was born to them, June 27, 1853.

One of these projects was the construction of a new bridge over the river at the site of the old bridge. The bridge was completed in 1911 and has since been a great help to the community.

The first bridge was built in 1811 and was a simple wooden structure. It was built by the community and was used for many years. While Jonas Dunham was a resident of Lee County, his sister, Susan Amelia and her husband, Alonzo Vreeland, moved to Lee County. When Susan and Alonzo came to Iowa, they traveled on the first train that ever ran west from Chicago, coming to Davenport where they were ferried across the Mississippi River. The people saluted the train with cannons that shot with such force that the glass was broken out of the train windows.

Shortly afterward, in the year 1853, Jonas Dunham and his wife came on farther north and west in the state, having purchased land from the government for themselves as well as for their father, Ephraim, and two sisters.

Jonas' 160 acres of land lay on what was then known as the Devil's Anvil, near the little village later known as Indian Town. Before moving out to this farm, Jonas and Mary first lived for a short time in Indian Town, where their twins, Eliza and Susan were born.

In 1854, Jonas went back to Indiana and helped his father, Ephraim Dunham, to dispose of his eighty acres of land in Noble County. This was traded for horses, which Jonas started to drive west to the new home in Iowa. He sold them off as he came along and had three left when he reached Indian Town. One of these three horses was called "Old Blaze". Jonas kept this horse on his farm for several years, then sold it to his sister, Susan Vreeland, and descendants of this horse were kept, until about ten years ago on the Vreeland farm.

The land belonging to Jonas' sister, Susan Vreeland, and her husband, was on the Old State Road, just on the west edge of what we now know as Montour.

Jonas Dunham and his brother-in-law, Joe Jack, who married Mary Ann Dunham, built and operated the first sawmill at Indian Town. They sawed the lumber for his sister, Susan Vreeland's first home, which was 24 feet square, and consisted of five rooms. It was the first frame house built on the Old State Road, on the hill just west of Montour, most of the other homes then being only log houses.

Hampton Voorhies, a cousin of both Jonas and Mary Clark Dunham, and his wife, Esther Jane, also came west at this time. They settled in the village of Indian Town, where they built and operated the first hotel the village had. This building is still standing and is used as a dwelling.

In these days, the nearest trading post was Iowa City, where they had to drive overland for all provisions. The trip generally took them six days, as they had to ford all the streams. If they were taking a load of wheat to sell, they had to sack it all, so that if they should get stuck in one of the streams, they could carry the grain, sack by sack, until the load was light enough that the horses could pull it out.

Many times they didn't have money enough to stop at the Taverns which were only five or six miles apart along the way, and would have to sleep under their wagons at night.

While they lived on the Anvil Farm, Jonas and Mary Dunham had six more children, namely: Jonas Junior, Mary Ann, Emma, Ella, Ephraim Williams and James Wilson. James died at the age of two days and his mother, Mary, left for her reward five days later, on November 3, 1864, being only 32 years old.

The stone barn built by Jonas Dunham while he lived on the Anvil Farm, is still standing, a building so solid and enduring that it reveals the character of its builder.

THE TEMPLE OF VENUS

On February 14, 1867, just two years after the death of Mary Dunham, Jonas married a second time, marrying Mrs. Minerva Luce. They moved to Davis County, Iowa, where one child was born to them, Stanley Marshall. They lived there about three years, when the second wife died on September 29, 1870. Jonas, Sr. then moved back to the Anvil Farm, later selling it and moving to the LeGrand Station Farm.

Jonas was always a great reader, keeping abreast of the times. The neighbors used to come often to ask his opinion on many things. As a child I used to love to sit and listen to his conversation and his tales of the Indians.

While Jonas Dunham lived on the LeGrand Station Farm, several of his children were married, the daughter Susan being the first to marry, on November 25, 1875, then Dennis Clark on Feb. 5, 1876, then Eliza on Feb. 15, 1877, and Mary Ann on June 20, 1877. The home was then broken up, Jonas, Sr., going to live with his children, first with Sue, then Mary, William and Clark, spending his last remaining years with his daughter, Emma, at whose home he died May 23, 1903, at the age of 81 years. He was buried beside his first wife and two children in Pleasant Hill Cemetery north of LeGrand, Iowa.

Although Jonas Dunham, Sr., had no wealth to leave his children, the heritage he left them, it seems to me, far out-weighed riches—a heritage of a sound and moral mind, a love for one's neighbors and a fear and love of God.
